

FedLine for the Web provides you with rapid, flexible and powerful access to Federal Reserve Financial Services. It uses the power of the Internet to provide your staff with convenient, same-time access to Federal Reserve services. FedLine for the Web is your premier option for access. As all existing and new services are developed for online access, FedLine for the Web will become your single source for valuable services and information.

Key Features

Broad Service Availability

You have access to a broad range of applications, including FedACHSM information, Fedwire[®] Funds Service information and Fedwire Securities Service information, cash services, savings bonds services, National Settlement Service agent inquiry, as well as accounting and billing information. In addition, you have access to check services including adjustments, MICR file delivery, account totals, advice delivery, check images and file submission. For the most current listing of available applications, visit www.frbservices.org.

Enhanced Functionality

FedLine for the Web offers you the most robust functionality of any of our access options. In addition to viewing your check advices, accounting statements, adjustments, FedACH advices and many other reports, you can drill down to view the transaction details associated with each of these documents. You can save time by integrating much of your current and historical business information in one convenient place.

Trusted Security

For more than 20 years, the Federal Reserve has offered secure and reliable electronic access to its services. FedLine for the Web incorporates several security features that are designed to create reliable protection for your business data, while providing flexibility to best meet your operational needs. Digital certificates allow you to restrict and customize access for specific individuals. Along with certificates, passwords limit access to authorized individuals. Encryption helps protect the information you submit and receive via FedLine for the Web.

User-Based Fees

FedLine for the Web fees allow you flexibility and choice, and reflect the emerging Internet industry practice of pricing for access or “subscription.” After a one-time set-up fee for each subscriber, your monthly charges will include an institution fee and a per-subscriber fee. The low monthly subscriber fee allows you to bring the convenience and efficiency of Web access to every area of your institution with minimal cost. Users who access only Treasury and/or cash services will not incur FedLine for the Web fees.

What Our Customers Have To Say

“The information gets to our accounts more quickly with MICR file delivery on FedLine for the Web, and we have less hassle with our proof machine.”

Diane Close, Farmers and Merchants State Bank
Langdon, North Dakota

“The ACH information available on FedLine for the Web is more detailed than that available on DOS-based FedLine. We can drill down to identify an error in a batch and research historical items without looking at a previous day’s tape.”

Mark Lukkonen, The Business Bank
Minnetonka, Minnesota

“We save money getting our returns on FedLine for the Web. We use to submit requests via fax, but the Web is much cheaper.”

Darin Jorstad, Citibank South Dakota

“It is so much easier to have the applications running at my desk with FedLine for the Web. It is also easier to store electronic files rather than paper.”

LaDonna Van Aartsen, First Farmers and Merchants Bank
Luverne, Minnesota

“The people who are using FedLine for the Web love it. Some of my group commented the other day, ‘Please don’t take our FedLine for the Web away!’”

Steve Meyer, First International Bank and Trust
Watford City, North Dakota
