

June 2, 2016

Update: Seattle Branch of the Federal Reserve Bank of San Francisco is Converting to a New Internal Cash Transactional System

To: Depository Institutions serviced by the Seattle Branch of the Federal Reserve Bank of San Francisco and Federal Reserve Cash Depot in Portland, OR

As communicated on May 23, the Federal Reserve has recently implemented an upgrade to its cash processing systems, including the internal cash transactional system and the FedCash[®] Services via the FedLine Web[®] access solution. This communication is to inform you that the Seattle Branch's conversion to the new internal cash transactional system has been rescheduled from June 3-5 to June 17-19.

FedCash Services via the FedLine Web Access Solution Scheduled Unavailability of Service

Consequently, the FedCash Services via the FedLine Web access solution maintenance scheduled for June 3-5 has also been rescheduled to June 17-19.

FedCash Services via the FedLine Web Access Solution will not be available for transactions beginning Friday, June 17, at 8:00 p.m. ET, while we convert to a new system and complete our scheduled weekend maintenance for the application. FedCash Services via the FedLine Web access solution will be available again for use by Monday, June 20, at 8:00 a.m. ET. The Federal Reserve will post a message on FedLine Home to inform users of the scheduled unavailability of service.

Cash Difference Advices – new format beginning June 20

The Federal Reserve System is going through a transition from paper Cash Difference Advices to electronic Cash Difference Advices through the FedLine[®] access solution and the FedMail[®] Service. You will continue to receive your paper Cash Difference Advices until the Federal Reserve discontinues paper Cash Differences Advices, which will be announced in the coming months. Due to the Seattle Branch's conversion to the new cash transactional system in June, beginning June 20, the Cash Difference Advices mailed to depository institutions serviced by the Seattle Branch will have a new format. For more information and to review an example of the electronic Cash Difference Advice format, visit the FedCash Services Deposit Difference Reports and Electronic Cash Difference Advices Resource Center.

We appreciate your patience during this upgrade. Please let us know if you encounter any issues with the FedCash Services via the FedLine Web access solution. If you have questions, please contact the Seattle Branch of the Federal Reserve Bank of San Francisco Cash Services at (888) 339-3506, option 1.

2700 Naches Avenue SW, Renton, WA 9857
www.frbsf.org