Why use instant payments?

By sending and receiving money instantly, you can:

- ✓ Conveniently and precisely send payments on your schedule
- ✓ Reduce the risk of late fees and overdraft charges
- ✓ Gain control and peace of mind knowing that money is sent and received immediately

How can you use instant payments? [OPTIONAL: Remove, add to or customize this use case section as needed based on your financial institution's own offerings]

There are many ways instant payments can be used. For example, you may:

- Transfer money to a family member, giving them access to that money immediately.
- Pay a caregiver, house sitter or other providers instantly for services they perform.
- Get paid immediately after a shift of work.
- Move money between your financial institution accounts in seconds without any waiting or worrying.
- Receive an instant auto loan disbursement from [us/FINANCIAL INSTITUTION NAME] or another lender.

Businesses can send and receive money in seconds too. A few examples include:

- Pay a supplier for an on-demand delivery right then and there, potentially getting a discount or strengthening your relationship with the supplier.
- Provide an instant refund to a buyer, improving customer experience and loyalty.
- Allow customers to pay you instantly, enabling you to access the money immediately and put it to use.

- Instantly transfer funds to an employee's account, ensuring quick and seamless access to earned wages, reimbursements and more.
